

I write in full agreement and support of the well-formed comment submitted to the Commission by the American Radio Relay League, the National Association for Amateur Radio.

The ARRL has provided the FCC with considerable evidence that clearly demonstrates the interference potential of BPL, not only to the Amateur Service, but other HF and VHF services as well, all of them vital to our national interests. There are also a wealth of data from other countries where BPL has been investigated and found to clearly interfere with radio communications.

I respectfully request that the Commission perform no action on their docket, and further strengthen its regulations to protect the Amateur Service and other radio services from existing BPL systems. Support of the Amateur Service is vital at this time, particularly with a need to maintain and strengthen our domestic core of trained Amateur Radio operators.
